

Junior Architects of America
2001 Odyssey Lane
Washington, D.C.

Dear Students,

The Junior Architects of America are always looking for young people with futuristic ideas. It is never too soon to think about what structures will look like in the future. Architects will be responsible for designing buildings where we will live and work. When people are studying to become architects, it is important for them to study the design of structures from the past in order to understand what changes will be necessary in futuristic buildings. We have a proposition for you.

The Architects of America National Convention is in late April. Students from around the country are being asked to submit models of structures for the year 3000. Fifty winning entries will be on display during the convention. Architects will vote for their favorite. The winning model will appear on a morning television show in April and will be displayed in the lobby of the JAA building.

If you are interested in creating an entry please complete the attached form and send it to the address on the form. While you are awaiting your official guidelines, we suggest you begin to take notice of geometric shapes on buildings and in your community. Keep notes of this information for later reference.
