Dear Students,

Your teacher has informed us of your research on Planet X. PEACE is deeply grateful for the information you have given us. We are disappointed that we must report to the world leaders that Planet X was deemed inhabitable.

Plan B is now being formulated. We have requested that all researchers create a description of a possible planet that humans might consider for future colonization. This description will be forwarded to NASA to assist them in searching for a future "Planet Earth." Your teacher will provide you resources to support your research and a method for gathering it.

In order to form this description, first you must consider our existing Earth and decide what makes it a good home for humans. Even though we are currently living on Earth, we know that our planet will not be able to continue to support living things.

It is time to make important decisions about our future. Please compile your recommendations for a possible planet that humans might consider for future colonization. Remember to consider all of the resources needed for survival. Your data should be shared with other researchers. The way you present your information may have an impact on our decision. Be creative.

Sincerely,

Executive Director, PEACE
