Stealing the Friendship

Amanda decided to make it up to Rosalie. She began by returning the iPod.

“Rosalie, I’m sorry. Oh, here’s your iPod,” said Amanda.

“Thanks. Sorry for screaming at you the other day, but you really should’ve talked to me,” said Rosalie.

“Friends?”

“Friends.”

So Valerie decided to talk to Amanda...in a gentle manner.

“Amanda, I really think you should make up to Rosalie. She was a really good friend to you, and I’m sure she’ll understand.”

“Yeah, I guess you’re right,” Amanda replied.

Rosalie confronted Amanda forcefully. She blamed her for stealing her stuff ...but and Amanda totally blew her off.

Amanda becomes jealous of Rosalie's popularity and smarts, and began to cheat off her work.

Amanda began to steal. Soon she was stealing expensive things like iPods and cell phones, and Rosalie knew it.

"I can't believe she would do that, Valerie! I just can't. I mean, I've known Amanda for, how long?"

"Five months."

"I've known her for five months and she's stealing from me."

"Why don't you talk to her, Rosalie?"

"That's a good idea. After lunch, I'm going to talk to her."

"Rosalie, what are you doing?" Amanda asked.

"Oh, English homework. Why?"

"Could I see it?"

Amanda said.

As if cheating wasn't bad enough....

"Amanda, why didn't you listen to Rosalie?"

"She just came up screaming. Do you think I'm going to listen to screaming?"

"Well, that's true," said Valerie.
