Powerful Snacks

Snacks are foods eaten between a regularly scheduled meal. It is suggested by many health professionals that people eat less at breakfast, lunch, and dinner and have two or three snacks each day. This is called grazing.

Snacks aren't extras—they are part of your diet, so you should think about your day and try to plan when and where you might feel the need for a snack. Choosing foods wisely can satisfy food cravings; enhance metabolism; and provide essential nutrients such as vitamins and minerals.

Hectic schedules and meals-on-the-run should not include fast foods and quick pick up snacks such as pastries, chips and candy. Select snacks from the food groups and balance one snack with another food from a different group. Keep snacks small and only snack when hungry and not bored.

How Do I Choose Wisely?
FAT	no more than 30% of total calories (about 3 grams per serving)
SATURATED FAT	no more than 10% of total calories (about 1 gram per serving)
SODIUM	no more than 140 mg per serving
ADDED SUGAR	no more than 20% of total calories or 4 grams per serving
