A note on transcriptions:

This work, while not an exact transcription, has been meticulously prepared to preserve the integrity and style of the original writing. Minimal additions of punctuation has been added for readability to include commas in lists, and periods in initials and abbreviations. Names of cities, towns and schools were written in the original text without uniformity, and some place names changed over time; the names of these places have been standardized within this text to include the spellings of Centreville, Dranesville, Falls Church and Mount Vernon. Original uses of abbreviations, capitalization, superscripts, and notations of “and” and currency have been unaltered. Names of all individuals who appear in this text have been researched, and if a discrepancy exists between the spelling of their name in the main text and in official records of the time period, a footnote has been included to inform researchers. Any indecipherable text has been notated with square brackets as to not unintentionally misspell or misrepresent a word or name. The line-by-line preparation was chosen to assist researchers in locating words in the original text.

Note: The inserted text in the margin is incorrect. The "higher branches" were what we would consider high school coursework today.
